

Sometimes good service has nothing to do with business.

We talk a lot about good customer service, but recently we were all reminded how important community service is. When two devastating storms affected our region, we appealed to our customers, vendors, friends and employees, and they more than answered the call. With their help, we were able to raise over $6,000 and deliver over 150 boxes of supplies for hurricane victims. It was tiny compared to the enormity of the suffering, but it proved how generous the folks in the plastics industry can be when people need help. Thank you to all those who helped in this mission. You are living examples of good servants.
